

The rainforest canopy

The canopy layer, seen from below

What we can see

A thick layer of leaves and branches
Monkeys moving between the trees
Very little sunlight reaching the ground

Why it matters

Most rainforest animals live here
It shelters the layers below from heavy rain
It produces much of the oxygen we breathe